14. Insurance: Review your coverage, including life insurance. Does your current policy provide adequate protection for your family? Consider reviewing the terms of the policy for the future. For example, is the policy term long enough to give your family the time to get on their feet? Consider switching to a lower-cost policy, if you need it. In most cases, there is no need to maintain life insurance for more than 10 to 15 years after you are 65.
